The mother of west coast rap artist and hip-hop producer Daz Dillinger, and also the aunt of west coast rapper Snoop Dogg wants to help the Hip-Hop community. Dr. Varnado has started a campaign to help some in the hip-hop community.

No she is not waging a movement to get her son and nephew to make 'meaningful' records, Dr. Varnado is dedicated to helping those artists who have "broken spirits" to receive the peace of mind of having faith in a higher being.

Dr. Varnado says "My generation has to get out of the church and into the community. We can"t turn our noses up at this generation we have to help them, we should be committed to helping them." Dr. Varnado continues, "I know that it is a struggle but I am committed to help those who are in need who have been molested, who have been abused, who have been peer pressured into a gang and so forth."

Dr. Varnado is committed to helping raise the esteem of the Hip Hop generation especially. Dr Varnado explains, "I listen to these lyrics and it's basically stemming from self-hatred. We have to stop this self hatred and it comes from us as Black people not believing we are beautiful." Dr. Varnado reveals, "So I started a "Because I don"t look like you doesn"t mean I am ugly campaign". Stacey Reynold explains, "I totally believe in what Dr. Varnado is doing because our children watch videos in the hip hop industry and half of those people have tons of make up on or are airbrushed and it is simply not realistic and then they go to school and their peers judge each other based on that unrealistic standard." Reynolds continues, "There are plenty of people who have murdered, stolen, and abused another simply because they believed the damaging words that their parents or peers have told them. At that point ones self esteem is totally shot. You can"t expect a clear picture out of damaged lenses".

The question that Dr. Varnado asks every time, "Before Kanye was it popular to rap about Jesus? After Kanye West will someone else dare to do it?"

Dr Varnado is a powerful speaker and spiritual guide for the youth. Dr. Varnado's fiery testimony and wonderful singing can also be found on Gods Army Reserves.
