Following last year's highly successful First Annual International Hip Hop Festival at Trinity College, which made international headlines on the BBC for its efforts to "change the world through hip-hop," this year's weekend of hip-hop performances, lectures, films, and discussions from March 30 to April 1, 2007, will continue to celebrate hip hop as a unifying factor across racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic backgrounds.

The Annual International Hip Hop Festival on the Trinity College campus will welcome a diverse range of artists to Hartford from Africa, Europe, Latin America, Australia and the Caribbean, including Iraqi-born Narcy, Senegalese Omzo, the Brazilian Eli Efi, and French/West African super group Les Nubians.

While the musical performances promise to be a powerful component to the weekend's activities, this year's festival, sponsored by Trinity College, Nomadic Wax, World Up, and Sol Productions, will also offer a variety of scholars, authors, and industry professionals to lead academic-oriented hip-hop panels and workshops.

On Friday, March 30, the weekend's events will kick-off with a lecture that will follow the screening of Hip-Hop Beyond Beats and Rhymes presented by Hip Hop Association. Filmmaker Byron Hurt and a variety of panelists will be present to discuss manhood, sexism, and homophobia in rap music and hip-hop culture. On Saturday, March 31, Jeff Chang, recipient of the 2005 American Book Award for his book, Can't Stop, Won't Stop, and most recently the author of Total Chaos: The Art and Aesthetics of Hip-hop, will join a panel of contributors to the book, including the George and Martha Kellner Chair in South Asian History and Professor of International Studies at Trinity College Vijay Prashad; Juba Kalamka, a pioneer in the Bay Areas Homo-Hop movement; and Fable, of the famous Rock Steady crew.

International Hip Hop Festival coordinators have collaborated with many Hartford-area organizations, such as the Charter Oak Cultural Center, Underground Coalition, Sankofa Kuumba, The Rumbah Family Center, and the Artist Collective, to strengthen the involvement of the community. One of the featured workshops will spotlight Hartford-natives, B-boys, who will teach participants about the art and history of break dancing. There will also be a graffiti workshop to learn how to do mural painting hosted by a group of international writers (graffiti artists) from the world-renowned Trust Your Hustle Tour.
