Hip-hop rap artist Ohene (pronounced Ô-hen-?) brings to the game what no other emcee does: the total package. As gifted a freestyler as he is a writer, Ohene can as easily please a crowd with an "off the dome" battle rhyme as he can with a number from his repartee. His music reaches all.

Already a phenomenon in Ghana, The Begotten Son of Rhyme has returned to the United States to claim his rightful spot among hip-hop's elite. The response was immediate. Critics, fans, and fellow artists all stand in awe of his lyrical prowess.

So respected for this gift, he now teaches a course at Temple University entitled The Art of Rap: How to Emcee.

After dropping the This Is NOT My Album! mix CD, a compilation of previously recorded material, self-released due to demand, and earning a Lyricist of the Year nomination from Philly Hip-Hop.com, Ohene has finally given the world his long awaited official debut, The Rapademics. Singles It Is "O" and 3rd Bar Invention are currently playing on independent and college radio stations across the country.

Also look for "Inner City Soul," the follow-up to "The Rapademics," due out later this year.

NEWS on Ohene

Ohene to Return to Accra, Ghana

The week of July 27th, RAHM Nation founder and Recording artist, Ohene, will return to Accra, Ghana, where this Philadelphia native spent his teenage years, to promote his sophomore album, "Inner City Soul." It is here where O began his musical career as a pianist and emcee. By the time he reached high school, he was already regarded as one of the countries top lyricists. Now, years later, with a vibrant career both in Ghana and the United States, Ohene is quickly becoming an international phenomenon. Single, "Tc n? k?h" is in heavy rotation on Ghanaian radio, with English language single, "A Child's Anthem" not far behind in the United States and United Kingdom.
